

WELCOME TO Miami Beach Botanical Garden

In 1962, next to the Miami Beach Convention Center, a city park became a “Garden Center” from a once vacant lot. Over the years, hurricanes and an economic downturn found the garden neglected.

Today’s Miami Beach Botanical Garden took a positive turn in 1996 when residents worked with the city government to create a Miami Beach Garden Conservancy. The Conservancy became a non-profit organization to restore the garden. In 2011, the Botanical Garden was redesigned.

This is not a large botanical garden. It covers 2.6 acres and is surrounded by the Miami Beach Convention Center, the Collins Canal and the Holocaust Memorial. It offers a Japanese and water garden, a place for a casual picnic and several planned events. Boutique shopping and environmental education programs can be found on the premises. This photo program shares the beauty of this place. There is no admission charge.

Sources: <https://www.mbgarden.org/about>, <https://tclf.org/landscapes/miami-beach-botanical-garden>, and <http://www.miamiandbeaches.com/arts/miami-beach-botanical-garden/100844>.

acuri.net John R. Vincenti

Miami Beach Botanical Garden